COMPARATIVES OF IDENTITY IN ENGLISH
A SEMANTIC STUDY
CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION
General statement of purpose .......................................................... 5
Theoretical assumptions ................................................................. 5
The scope of the present study .......................................................... 8

Chapter I: TRANSFORMATIONAL-GENERATIVE ACCOUNTS OF COMPARATIVE CONSTRUCTIONS
1.1 Twin-sentence base analyses of comparative constructions .................. 10
   1.1.1 Robert Lees's Grammatical Analysis of the English Comparative Constructions 10
1.2 Problems of the two-sentence analysis of comparative constructions ........ 12
   1.2.1 The structure of constituent clauses ....................................... 12
   1.2.2 Phrasal complements in comparative constructions ....................... 17
   1.2.3 Constraints on comparative clause pairing .................................. 19
   1.2.4 The comparative transformation ............................................. 21
1.3 Revisions of the twin-sentence base analysis .................................... 23
   1.3.1 Campbell and Wales's simplex base for comparative constructions ...... 24
   1.3.2 Underlying negative element in comparative clause ....................... 25
   1.3.3 EXCEED and EQUAL predicates in the semantic structures of comparative constructions ........................................................................... 29
   1.3.4 Comparative constructions in Natural Generative Grammar ................ 30
   1.3.5 Rusiecki (1976) ........................................................................ 31
   1.3.6 Localist interpretation of comparative constructions ..................... 33
1.4 On the inadequacy of transformational theories of comparative constructions 34

Chapter II: ASPECTS OF THE IDENTITY SITUATION
2.1 Semantic relational structure in comparatives of identity ....................... 35
2.2 Cases of identity ............................................................................ 38
2.3 Exact equality in quantitative comparatives of identity ......................... 39

Chapter III: QUANTITATIVE COMPARATIVES OF IDENTITY
3.1 General characteristics ..................................................................... 41
3.2 Adjectival comparatives of identity .................................................. 42
   3.2.1 Presuppositions associated with the standard of comparison ............ 43
   3.2.2 Property predicates, their arguments, and the surface structure of adjectival comparatives of identity .............................................................. 48
   3.2.3 Complex adjectival comparatives of identity .................................. 50
3.3 Adverbial comparatives of identity .................................................. 52
   3.3.1 True adverbial comparatives of identity ....................................... 53
   3.3.2 Complex adverbial comparatives of identity .................................. 55
   3.3.3 Surface exponents of property predicates in adjectival and adverbial
       comparatives of identity .............................................................. 57
3.4 Overly quantified comparatives of identity ........................................ 58
   3.4.1 Overly quantified degree comparatives of identity ......................... 60
   3.4.2 Amount and number comparatives of identity ................................ 61
3.5 Comparatives of identity with explicit standard ................................... 64
Chapter IV: BEYOND THE AS-AS PATTERN
4.1 Statement of purpose ........................................... 67
4.2 Same, identical, equal and comparatives of identity .......... 67
4.3 Constructions of comparison and manner ...................... 69
4.4 Constructions of proportionate agreement .................... 72
Chapter V: SUMMARY AND CONCLUSIONS
5.1 Summary ........................................................... 77
5.2 New answers, new questions ...................................... 78
BIBLIOGRAPHY .......................................................... 80
Streszczenie (Summary in Polish) ................................... 83