

ANGLICA WRATISLAVIENSIA XXII

Małgorzata Trebisz

The Novella in England
at the Turn of the XIX and XX Centuries

H. James, J. Conrad, D. H. Lawrence

WROCLAW 1992
WYDAWNICTWO UNIwersYTETU WROCLAWSKIEGO

CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION	5
I. A brief outline of the literary history of the novella in England and the accompanying terminology	7
II. The Renaissance novella and the German Novellentheorien	12
III. Some modern approaches to the theory of the novella	17
1. Defining the length of the novella	17
2. Achieving the artistic effect through technique	17
3. An attempt at classification of the forms of the modern novella	18
4. The novella as metaphor and metafiction — evolution, composition, generic conventions	20
IV. Conclusion	23
CHAPTER I. Henry James's Novellas	25
Introduction	25
I. The Turn of the Screw — an apologue about reality and its appearance to the creative mind — the story in making	27
II. The Altar of the Dead — identity and self-knowledge theme apologue	31
III. What Maisie Knew — an action with a serious plot of learning	33
IV. The Spoils of Poynton — a tragedy	37
V. The Birthplace — a satire	40
CHAPTER II. Joseph Conrad's Novellas	43
Introduction	43
I. Heart of Darkness — an apologue	44
II. The Secret Sharer — an action with a serious plot of learning	48
III. The Planter of Malata — a tragedy	50
CHAPTER III. D.H. Lawrence's Novellas	53
Introduction	53
I. The Fox — an action with a plot of learning	54
II. St. Mawr — The "Sleeping Beauty" example apologue	59
III. The Man Who Died — an apologue	62
CONCLUSIONS	65
BIBLIOGRAPHY	71
STRESZCZENIE	74