

EWA KĘBŁOWSKA-ŁAWNICZAK

The Visual Seen and Unseen

Insights into Tom Stoppard's Art

Tom Stoppard

WYDAWNICTWO UNIWERSYTETU WROCŁAWSKIEGO

Contents

Preface . . . . .	7
I. Vision, Visuality, and Image in Context . . . . .	11
Vision, Visuality and the Verbal Bias . . . . .	12
Liberation from Scenography and Movement towards a Various Defined Event . . . . .	17
Word and image Contract and the Concept of Theatre . . . . .	21
Avant-garde Contributions to the Visual Project . . . . .	23
Anti-illusionism . . . . .	24
Against Autonomy . . . . .	26
Against Language and the Logic of the Conscious . . . . .	30
Reconstructing the Concept of the Modern Visual Field: Vision, Spectator and Object . . . . .	36
II. Playing with Perspective(s) in the Early Plays . . . . .	63
The Collapse of Perspective and the Fall of the Cartesian Subject in Albert's Bridge . . . . .	65
Striving to Restore the Collapsed Perspective: Enter a Free Man . . . . .	73
Anti-retinality and Multiperspectivism in Artist Descending a Staircase . . . . .	80
Multiperspectivism and Labyrinthine Patterning in Travesties . . . . .	94
III. Denigration of Vision in Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead : Legitimation Crisis and the Field of Desire . . . . .	105
Legitimation According to Lyotard . . . . .	107
Does Hamlet Provide a Legitimizing Grand Narrative? . . . . .	111
Hamlet's Metanarrative and the Lyotardian petit récit . . . . .	115
Lyotardian petit récit and the Stoppardian Predilection for Games . . . . .	118
The Field of Desire . . . . .	122
IV. The Paranoid Eye and the Panoptic Eye of Surveillance . . . . .	131
Generating Worlds in The Real Inspector Hound : From Epistemology to Ontology . . . . .	133
Visuality According to Magritte: Resemblance and Similitude . . . . .	146
The Panoptic Eye of Surveillance in Every Good Boy Deserves Favour . . . . .	163
V. The Body and the Hyperreal in the Theatrical Field of Vision: Jumpers . . . . .	173
Influences . . . . .	174
Triggering-off the Hyperreal . . . . .	175
The Moon or the Cosmic Body . . . . .	178
General Structure and Visual Complexity . . . . .	180
Jumpers in the Moon . . . . .	182
The Fantasy of Male and Female Bodies in the Field of Vision . . . . .	185
The Circus Body and the Stripper . . . . .	193
Body and New Technologies of Vision: Corpse, Robot, Mannequin and Skin . . . . .	199
Philosophical Coda . . . . .	203

VI. Visualizing Auto/Biography in the Intercultural Imperial Discourses of Indian Ink and in The Invention of Love . . . . .	208
The Travelling Spectator/Seer in Indian Ink : Seeing and Being Seen as Travelling Spectator and Object of Biographical Account . . . . .	216
The Painter's First Contract . . . . .	224
The Second Contract . . . . .	227
Dissolution of Collectingness . . . . .	232
Auto/Biography and Monument in The Invention of Love . . . . .	237
VII. Seeing and Reading: The Loss of Prospects and the Privilege of Shortsightedness in Arcadia . . . . .	253
Conclusion . . . . .	273
Appendix 1: "The Arab" by Charles Stuart Caverley . . . . .	279
Appendix 2: "The Elephant in the Moon" by Samuel Butler . . . . .	280
Works Cited . . . . .	282
Tom Stoppard . . . . .	282
Playtexts . . . . .	282
Interviews . . . . .	282
Articles . . . . .	283
Critical Approaches, Theory and History . . . . .	284
Visuality . . . . .	291
Other Sources . . . . .	297
Electronic/Internet Sources . . . . .	300
Coda: Wizualność widzialna i niewidzialna. Studium sztuki dramatycznej Toma Stopparda	302
Index of Names . . . . .	311
List of Illustrations . . . . .	318